Jonas challenges motor skills and balance

Jonas is one of the charming two-tower play environments in MiniPlay. Thanks to its size and the number of play activities, it accommodates up to 10-12 children. The children can access the play environment using the traditional stairway with low steps and handgrips or via the crawling ramp. The crawling ramp has steps which can be used for holding onto and crawling up, or – even harder – walking up and keeping your balance. The bridge not only connects the two towers – children can use it as a place to pause and observe their surroundings through the window, or play hide-and-seek. Go on the slide and feel the rush of excitement, or see the world from a new perspective through the dome window in the tree top.

Play panel for fiddly fingers

Like the rest of the MiniPlay family, Jonas is designed to support children's motor skill development from about six months and up to four years. One of the really exciting play panels is the car/bee panel. On the outside of the panel is a beehive and a moving bee, which flies from flower to hive. The height and the meandering track both challenge children's fine motor skills and their sense of movement.

The other side of the panel resembles the view from a car driver's seat with a key, steering wheel, gears and a 'speed' control, represented by a tortoise and a hare. The key hangs from a galvanised metal chain, which stimulates the senses and fine motor skills, and makes this panel perfect for little fiddly fingers.
